VIDALIA

by STEWART LEMOINE

Teatro revives this vivacious contemporary spin on the classic screwball form. Industrial espionage, high-end menswear, and a superior breed of onion all figure prominently... as do three identical briefcases. It's a ricochet romp, with a cast led by Andrew MacDonald-Smith and Belinda Cornish.

EVERYBODY LOVES ROBBIE

by ELLEN CHORLEY

Chloe loves Robbie. Everybody does. But Robbie loves Chloe back. They are the star triple-threat couple of their high school drama club and have dreams of their future success together in Musical Theatre (or straight plays, if Musical Theatre doesn't work out). But- speaking of straight- suddenly Robbie wonders if he's gay. And Chloe begins to wonder, too. And what does that mean for their future together?

by NICK GREEN

On a sunny summer weekend, Gary and Louise invite their closest friends and family to celebrate the second birthday of their child J, who they are raising without a gender. As the day unfolds grudges are revealed, and secrets come to a head. Nick Green's startling new comedy skewers the excesses of the politically correct and the possible future we are setting up for our children.

A startling new comedy from one of Canada's most exciting young playwrights.

5 @ 50

by BRAD FRASER

Acclaimed playwright and Edmonton native Brad Fraser (Kill Me Now, Love and Human Remains) wrote 5 @ 50 for all the “excellent middle-aged actresses who were having trouble finding parts.” When Olivia loses control at her fiftieth birthday party, her three best friends decide to intervene once and for all, much to the irritation of Olivia and her long-term partner Nora. But is she the only one battling a demon or does each of these women face an addiction of one kind or another? 5 @ 50 is a raw and darkly comedic portrayal of turning fifty in contemporary society, and of the friendships we can’t live without.
